The Bombay Gazette

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1882.

THERE has been no clearer exposition of the policy of the Government of India with regard to local self-government than is contained in the able address of the Viceroy to the Lahore Municipality, a full report of which is telegraphed by our Lahore correspondent. Notwithstanding all that has been written and spoken on this subject, Lord Ripon's speech will be read with hardly diminished interest. His remarks are characterised by a candour and straightforwardness which are quite foreign to the formal phraseology of a Government Resolution. He boldly avows the hopes and the fears which he entertains regarding the fate of his great experiment ; and while remaining sanguine of its ultimate success, he shows his thorough appreciation of the merits of the subject by estimating, to the fullest extent, the magnitude of the difficulties it must certainly encounter. In his brief history of the origin of the present scheme, the Viceroy amply disproves the charge of instituting subversive change which has on several occasions been brought against him. The Government of India have, in fact, placed themselves in the position of Lord Mayo, and have, to the best of their belief, realised the spirit and intention with which he inaugurated the decentralization policy a dozen years ago. In writing on this portion of the subject, the other day, we endeavoured to trace the natural connection between the investment of local committees with administrative functions and the earlier concession of similar powers to the local Governments. The first, we considered, was the logical outcome of the second, and, in fact, the only points open to discussion were the time and manner in which the development was to be effected. Referring to this same question, Lord Ripon said they had thought it their duty to see "whether the time had not come to apply yet more fully, and to carry out yet further, the policy Lord Mayo had inaugurated. For it must ever be borne in mind that that policy, in its full intention, was not one of only provincial decentralization, but Lord Mayo looked with the eye of a statesman to promote also the great object of self-government ; and it seemed to us that we could not better apply the principles which he laid down than by carrying decentralization beyond the stage at which, not I believe in accordance with his desire, but owing to the circumstances which followed his unhappy decease, it had been arrested, and to advance it from decentralization as between the Government of India and provincial Governments to decentralization as between those provincial Governments and the local bodies within their jurisdiction. But when we came to look at the problem and to seek a solution, we found it essential to infuse new life and fresh vigour into the local bodies on which we desired to confer fuller and more extended powers. These then, gentlemen, were the principles we acted on, but I think I may perhaps make more clear the views of the Government of India and remove some misconceptions which appear to exist in the minds of some persons, if, having told you what was our object, our purpose, I tell you what we did not desire to do. We did not desire, gentlemen, to introduce into India a cut-and-dried system framed upon the English model or based upon specially English political theories. We did not desire to lay down an uniform system to be adopted under all circumstances throughout the length and breadth of this great land, whether in regard to the composition of local bodies, to the extension of the franchise, or to the system of control. On the contrary, no one who reads the Resolution of the Government of India of last May can fail to perceive that what we sought was to see a variety of systems tried in different parts of the country, in order that we might find out by actual experience what system was, or what systems were, best suited to each province and each portion of this great peninsula. (Hear, hear.) We desired above all things that the new arrangements for self-government should, as far as possible, be those which were most consistent with the habits and customs of the people in different parts of India ; that they be drawn up in close consultation with representative men of different classes and districts, and that they be based, so far as may be, upon indigenous native institutions which still exist ; and that we should avail ourselves to the utmost of those "organic groups," to use the felicitous expression of my hon'ble friend the Lieutenant-Governor, which still exist amongst us, so that the system to be founded might be one consonant with the traditions of the country and the feelings and requirements of the people. Then again, gentlemen, we do not require that the system which we wished to inaugurate be applied by the various local Governments to every portion of the territory under their respective control. We are not so foolish as to believe that all parts of India are fitted for a system of this description. We know very well that in this great land there are men of many races, in many stages of civilization, and that while you find in the most advanced parts of India men of developed intellects, great intelligence, skilled in the management of their own private affairs, and well capable of managing public affairs in their own localities, there are also parts of the country which are inhabited by races still scarcely removed from a savage state, and that it would be utterly absurd to apply the principle of self-government for the Sonthals, Bheels, and Khonds. Again, gentlemen, we did not expect that the policy which we were adopting would have as its immediate result better practical administration. I will be very frank upon this subject, for as we have stated plainly in the Resolution of last May that we are quite aware that it was very possible that in many instances a better practical administration may not in the first instance result, we have another object in view—the education and training of the people ; and we shall be content to put up, under due restriction, for a limited time, with many failures of practical administration. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, it is a great pleasure to me to speak on the subject of local self-government here in the Punjab, because the Government have found in my friend Sir C. Aitchison an able, earnest, honest supporter of their policy in this respect, and it is to me indeed a source of the highest gratification that a man of his experience and his talents should give the weight of his great authority to a measure with which I am so intimately connected. Sir C. Aitchison at once apprehended to its full extent and in its true meaning the policy of Government in the matter ; and if I were to seek for the best commentary and the best development of the Resolution of the 18th May last, for the best practical application and exposition of the principles upon which the Resolution is founded, I should need no other document than the Punjab Resolution of my honourable friend. (Cheers.) H. E. the Viceroy then eulogised generally the Punjab Commission, and in continuing said :—Gentlemen, it seems to me, then, that in this matter the Government have done their part. We have laid down our policy, your Lieutenant-Governor has heartily accepted it, and I am sure that he will be supported by those who are subordinate to him in this province. It remains, therefore, in the Punjab as in the rest of India, for the people to do their part ; it remains for you, gentlemen, men of influence and education, to come forward in answer to the call of Government and take your proper place in the administration of the country (cheers); it remains for you to say whether this policy is to be attended with success or failure. I do not doubt that the appeal thus made to you will be adequately answered on your part. (Cheers.) I feel no doubt that the promise held out in your address will be fulfilled, because I see from the words that you have employed you justly appreciate the qualities on which we are about to make a demand, and you are prepared to make that sacrifice of your time and of your convenience which you are required now to make in the interests of your neighbours and the country at large. But, gentlemen, nevertheless I do not doubt, as I have said already, that we shall have to encounter and lament not a few instances of failure. There will be much, I dare say, in many places, to try the patience of the local officers and disappoint the hopes of Government, but this is a matter in which, before all things, patience and gentle-handling are required. If, having planted this small tree of self-government, we are always pulling it up to look at its roots to see how far they have got down into the ground, I venture to say this experiment will be no more successful than those which preceded it. (Cheers.) Twenty years ago an eminent man, one of your Lieutenant-Governors, loved, I believe, alike by European and native—I mean Donald Macleod—(cheers) sketched out the whole policy which the Government have now adopted ; and if twenty years ago his proposals had been accepted and carried out in the spirit in which they were made, the Punjab could now have been at the head of India in this respect. (Cheers.) I say there are gentlemen that have little doubt unless we are patient we shall fail ; that if we try to drive those who are to manage those local institutions too hard, if we expect too much from them at first, we shall only make an ignominious fiasco. I therefore trust ample time will be given to work out this policy to the true end, and we shall be prepared to accept many shortcomings, in the hope that they will teach, by the best of all instructors—experience—those who are entrusted with the administration how to walk successfully in the path upon which they are about to enter ; but at the same time, gentlemen, this also I must say, that though I desire to see much patience exercised, and though I deprecate haste, undue and over-eager expectations of immediate results, I, on the other hand, am firmly determined this experiment shall not fail through pertinacious neglect, sloth, or continued incompetence of local bodies about to spring up. (Cheers.) Not to do so would be to betray the policy which we are advocating and to abandon those interests we have most nearly at heart. We must therefore retain sufficient control over these local bodies—control varying in different parts of the country according to the advancement of the people and the circumstances of each district. We must maintain, I say, sufficient control over these local bodies to see they do not permanently, obstinately, and slothfully neglect their duty towards their fellow citizens ; and that control for my part I am determined to maintain, and see that it be applied practically and firmly, and still more firmly by local Governments. I believe it unnecessary to ask for any greater powers of control than those for which ample precedence is found in the laws of England. You know that there is no country in which local self-government has firmer root and made greater advance than in England, and you may perhaps be aware that there is scarcely any country in the world in which men are more jealous of Government interference. When, therefore, I say that all the control we want is that which the English Parliament has given to the English Government over English municipal bodies, I am confident that is an amount of control of which no man can reasonably complain. Gentlemen, I need not detain you longer. You touched in your address upon other subjects of interest ; you have spoken of the new Punjab University, of the extension of primary education, but I need not offer you observations on these topics now, because in the course of next week I shall be called upon to preside at the inaugural meeting of the University, and that is the fitting time to make the remarks which suggest themselves to me upon that or kindred matters. You also told me of the successful result of your efforts locally in regard to water-supply and sanitation. I have heard that success with great satisfaction, because I attach high importance indeed to all questions connected with sanitation. Do not think that the public are at all aware of the extent of disease preventable to which human misery may be alleviated by adequate sanitary arrangements. (Cheers.) I am therefore very glad to find from the language which you have addressed to me that you yourselves are awake to the importance of this matter, and that you are likely to set a good example to the rest of the Province in the matter. Gentlemen, once more I thank you for your friendly words. I see with the greatest preasure that you understand the spirit in which I desire to work ; and the address delivered to me will do much to encourage me to continue my labour in order to promote to the utmost of my power the advancement of the well-being and happiness of the people entrusted to my care. (Loud applause.)

The deputation then withdrew.

THE Closure has been carried, and under pretty much the circumstances that were foreseen. The extreme Irish members voted against the Government. They could hardly have done otherwise, if they did not wish to condemn by their votes the tactics they have zealously pursued—and, it must be owned, with a considerable amount of success—for the last three or four years. Of course, they were well aware that the Government majority was secure, and therefore their past policy might be vendicated without endangering the new relations established by what is commonly, though incorrectly, designated the "Kilmainham compact." Their action now does not imply any fresh declaration of hostilities on their part towards Mr. Gladstone. The new policy of the Irish National party is directed towards obtaining from the present Government an assimilation of the Irish franchise to that of England, the creation of county boards, and as many other instalments towards Home Rule as may be justified by public opinion in Great Britain. On this account Mr. Gladstone's appeal is somewhat significant. It is the response of the Ministry to the platform drawn up by the "Moderates" in Dublin. The Prime Minister is reported to have said that he had "nothing more at heart than local self-government for Ireland." This is a phrase which, like many of the Premier's utterances, might mean a great deal and might also mean very little, according to Mr. Gladstone's position some months hence. It might cover Home Rule or it might go no farther than county boards, to which the Government are already committed. Mr. Parnell will, no doubt, seek to interpret it in the former sense, and next session the Irish party will persistently press the Government to give practical effect to their solicitude for Irish local government in the manner, of course, in which that term is accepted by Mr. Parnell. It is not stated whether the attempted assassination of Judge Lawson was likely to have originated in a political organization, or was merely the act of an individual fanatic. Naturally the attempt has arisen out of the imprisonment of Mr. Gray, and is therefore to a certain extent political in its motive. But the fact that the would-be assassin was arrested at once would tend to show that he was acting alone. Agents of homicidal associations in Ireland have not hitherto had much difficulty in getting away.

Although Sir Stafford Northcote has demanded a date for the discussion of his motion requiring more information respecting the Egyptian policy of the Government, it is most unlikely that any real debate can arise on a resolution of such an invertebrate character. Mr. Gladstone evidently feared that the motion was a device for obstructing the Closure, and he refused to grant a night until the Procedure Rules were finally disposed of. He has, however, promised to make a statement on Egyptian affairs on Tuesday. As this will possibly take the wind out of the Conservative sails, the idea of a debate will either be abandoned, or, what is more likely, the discussion will degenerate into a display on the part of Mr. Ashmead Bartlett and a few of the "active" Tories. It is highly improbable that the Conservatives will be able to agree on any motion challenging the Government's Egyptian policy on its merits.

THE preparations for the naval entertainment are being pushed forward rapidly. Workmen are engaged on the Oval re-erecting mandwas for the spectators. Arrangements have already been made to preserve order within the enclosure. Sir Frank Souter has undertaken the duty, so that no anxiety need be felt on this score. Unluckily, the departure of the Tenasserim is fixed for Saturday, but as the committee are particularly anxious that the men of the Indian Marine should take part in the entertainment—a wish which is equally shared by the citizens—we hope the authorities will delay the sailing of this vessel, which rendered such effective service in Egypt, for at least one day.

THE VICEROY ON LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

(BY TELEGRAPH FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

LAHORE, Nov. 11.

On Wednesday night the Viceroy received a deputation from the Lahore Municipality at Government House, and was, presented with a peculiarly loyal address.

The Viceroy in reply said,—Gentlemen of the Municipality of Lahore, I am grateful to you for the address which you have just delivered to me. I am much gratified—nay, I may truly say I am much touched—by the tone of that address, and by the proof which it affords of the manner in which you appreciate the spirit by which I have been guided in my administration of India. Gentlemen, you are quite right when you say that I feel a warm and heartfelt sympathy for the people of this country, and you are right also when you state in your address that it is my desire to act in the great office which I now fill not merely as the ruler, but more as the friend, of the people of India ; and I can truly say that if I find when my term of office draws to a close that the sentiments expressed in your address are still those entertained by the public of this country, I shall feel that I am amply rewarded for any labours which may have fallen to my share, because I shall have done something to attain one of the great ends which I set before me when I came out here, namely, to do what in me lay to bind together in closer union than heretofore the British Government and the Indian people. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, you have touched in your address upon a question which is exciting much attention in this country at the present time, and in which, as you know, I myself feel a warm interest ; I mean the subject of local self-government. I will therefore for a short time address to you some observations in connection with that important question. I believe that you are aware that the main primary object of the Government of India in the steps which it is taking at the present time for the development and extension of self-government in this country is to advance and promote the political and popular education of the people, and to do what may be done under the circumstances of these times to induce the best and most intelligent men of the community to come forward and take a share in the management of their own local affairs, and guide and aid and train them for the attainment of that important object. Gentlemen, we have been led to adopt this policy at this time not in consequence of any mere inclinations of our own, but I may truly say that we have been almost forced to adopt it by the circumstances of the times with which we have had to deal. We had last year, as you are aware, to make arrangements for the renewal of those quinquennial provincial contracts which were originally introduced in the time of Lord Mayo, and which formed one of the distinguishing features of that great policy of decentralization which will always constitute one of the greatest claims of that distinguished statesman upon the gratitude of India. Those five-years contracts running out, we had to consider upon the terms on which they were to be renewed ; and when we came to turn our attention to that question we thought it our duty to see whether the time had not come to apply yet more fully, and to carry out yet further, the policy Lord Mayo had inaugurated. For it must ever be borne in mind that that policy, in its full intention, was not one of only provincial decentralization, but Lord Mayo looked with the eye of a statesman to promote also the great object of self-government ; and it seemed to us that we could not better apply the principles which he laid down than by carrying decentralization beyond the stage at which, not I believe in accordance with his desire, but owing to the circumstances which followed his unhappy decease, it had been arrested, and to advance it from decentralization as between the Government of India and provincial Governments to decentralization as between those provincial Governments and the local bodies within their jurisdiction. But when we came to look at the problem and to seek a solution, we found it essential to infuse new life and fresh vigour into the local bodies on which we desired to confer fuller and more extended powers. These then, gentlemen, were the principles we acted on, but I think I may perhaps make more clear the views of the Government of India and remove some misconceptions which appear to exist in the minds of some persons, if, having told you what was our object, our purpose, I tell you what we did not desire to do. We did not desire, gentlemen, to introduce into India a cut-and-dried system framed upon the English model or based upon specially English political theories. We did not desire to lay down an uniform system to be adopted under all circumstances throughout the length and breadth of this great land, whether in regard to the composition of local bodies, to the extension of the franchise, or to the system of control. On the contrary, no one who reads the Resolution of the Government of India of last May can fail to perceive that what we sought was to see a variety of systems tried in different parts of the country, in order that we might find out by actual experience what system was, or what systems were, best suited to each province and each portion of this great peninsula. (Hear, hear.) We desired above all things that the new arrangements for self-government should, as far as possible, be those which were most consistent with the habits and customs of the people in different parts of India ; that they be drawn up in close consultation with representative men of different classes and districts, and that they be based, so far as may be, upon indigenous native institutions which still exist ; and that we should avail ourselves to the utmost of those "organic groups," to use the felicitous expression of my hon'ble friend the Lieutenant-Governor, which still exist amongst us, so that the system to be founded might be one consonant with the traditions of the country and the feelings and requirements of the people. Then again, gentlemen, we do not require that the system which we wished to inaugurate be applied by the various local Governments to every portion of the territory under their respective control. We are not so foolish as to believe that all parts of India are fitted for a system of this description. We know very well that in this great land there are men of many races, in many stages of civilization, and that while you find in the most advanced parts of India men of developed intellects, great intelligence, skilled in the management of their own private affairs, and well capable of managing public affairs in their own localities, there are also parts of the country which are inhabited by races still scarcely removed from a savage state, and that it would be utterly absurd to apply the principle of self-government for the Sonthals, Bheels, and Khonds. Again, gentlemen, we did not expect that the policy which we were adopting would have as its immediate result better practical administration. I will be very frank upon this subject, for as we have stated plainly in the Resolution of last May that we are quite aware that it was very possible that in many instances a better practical administration may not in the first instance result, we have another object in view—the education and training of the people ; and we shall be content to put up, under due restriction, for a limited time, with many failures of practical administration. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, it is a great pleasure

SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE'S MOTION ON EGYPT.

Sir Stafford Northcote then asked the Premier to fix a day for the debate on the motion "that the House is entitled to further information respecting the employment and cost of the British forces now in Egypt." The Premier, in reply, refused to arrange a day for the discussion of the motion, until the Procedure Bill is finished with. He, however, promised to make a statement respecting Egypt on the 14th instant.

THE Viceroy's proposed visit to Peshawur is to be a very hurried one, because the doctors are afraid of a return of the illness of two years since. In the original programme two days was the time allotted to Peshawur, but His Excellency's medical adviser, in view of past disquieting experiences, strenuously objected to more than a few hours' sojourn there, on account of its evil reputation for malaria.

WRITING of the murder of a soldier by a comrade at Colaba barracks the other day, the Bombay Catholic Examiner says:—"The victim was a favourite, with two good-conduct badges, and his death wound was inflicted by a man who, last year, at Baroda, had attempted suicide."

A SPECIAL meeting of the Anjuman-i-Islam of Bombay was convened yesterday afternoon, at which most of the principal Mahomedan gentlemen of Bombay and the managers and motawallis of the different mosques were present. The meeting unanimously passed a resolution thanking the managing committee of the Anjuman-i-Islam for the pains they had taken in the matter of the supply of Vehar water to the mosques and for procuring the restoration of water to the mosques from which the connections had been already cut off. They also authorised the Anjuman-i-Islam to bring about an amicable settlement with the Municipality on the most favourable terms that could be obtained for the Mussulman community of Bombay. There semed to be a general feeling amongst the gentlemen present that the best arrangement would be to charge a fixed sum to each mosque, and that the fixing of metres should be avoided. We understand that negotiations for an amicable settlement with the Municipality have already been set on foot by the Hon. B. Tyabjee, and we trust that his exertions on behalf of the Anjuman-i-Islam and the Mussulman community may produce a result that may be satisfactory to all parties, and may be accepted as a final settlement of this long-pending and troublesome question.

THE Calcutta agents of the Ducal Line of steamers have received a telegram from London stating that the steamer Duke of Westminster, outward bound, put into Malta on the 4th instant with the cargo on fire. The fire, however, was extinguished, and the vessel proceeded on her voyage last Tuesday morning.

THE steamer Clan Campbell was advertised for sale at Mauritius on October 13. The steamer, with her equipment and cargo, was to be sold as she lay on the reef at Bel Ombere, where she had been wrecked; but the purchaser was to pay all customs dues and all expenses incurred by the customs on the steamer's account.

A SPECIAL telegram from the Pioneer's London correspondent, 8th November, states:—The representatives of the Indian troops have been feted splendidly, and their reception has been most enthusiastic.

A MARKED effect has been produced in the Avan Court, the Indian Daily News' correspondent at Rangoon telegraphs, by our attitude in reference to the treaty and future occasions for remonstrance. Decidedly conciliatory councils prevail at Mandalay, which give hope of eventual good results.

"INQUIRER" writes to an up-country paper:—I see that the Afghan war medal has been awarded to Mr. G. R. Taylor, Postmaster of Quetta. May I ask if the postal officials who worked in Egypt are entitled to medals? I understand that Mr. Cornwall, who went in charge of the postal arrangements, was present at Tel-el-Kebir during the fighting, so that he should get the medal, with clasp. Would it be worth while applying for the Khedive's medal also?

THE charge of unnecessary butchery of the Egyptians brought against the British troops cannot at any rate apply to the Indian Contingent. An up-country paper hears, on the best authority, that Colonel Stockwell, of the Seaforth Highlanders, on entering one Egyptian battery, merely used the flat of his sword against the gunners; while Colonel Macnaghten, commanding the 13th Bengal Lancers, in the pursuit, contented himself with belabouring the fugitives with a thick stick. "Officers and men, European and native, who had served in Afghanistan, scorned to kill enemies who had no idea of hand-to-hand fighting. It would have been pitiful work in comparison with their old tough struggles with Afghan ghazis."

THE official summary of the North-West Provinces crop and weather reports for the week ended on the 8th November states:—"There has been no rain. Rain is wanted in Lucknow and part of Sitapur; the kharif harvest and rabi sowings are progressing. Prices are stationary. Cholera continues in Rai Bareli and Partabgarh, but is disappearing elsewhere. Cattle-disease continues in four districts."

THE following is the official summary of the reports on the weather and crops in Assam for the week ended the 26th of October.—"Weather bright and fine: nights cool. Ahu harvest completed in most districts, and prospects of Sali paddy excellent. Public health good. Cattle-disease still reported from Darrang, Nowgong, and Lakhimpur."

THE Bengal Government estimates the stocks of rice in and around Calcutta for the first week in November at 16,59,867 maunds, of which six lakhs are vailable for export.

OF the proposed Agricultural Banks' scheme, the Pioneer writes:—The first attempt is to be tried in the Bombay Presidency. If this, and one or two similar ones, turn out successful, the stream of European capital will begin to flow towards India. No more important project has ever engaged the attention of Government. Success can be attained by no efforts of the Government alone, however strenuous and well-directed. It can only be attained by the co-operation of the people themselves. But if it does come, it will result in something more than a mere triumph of the Government of the day:-it will add, materially and lastingly, to the prosperity of the country."

THE Bengal Times contributes the latest addition to the curiosities of the Indian Press. The paper of October 28 consists merely of advertisements, and the following explanation printed on a slip of brown paper:—

"EXPLANATORY.—In consequence of the serious illness of our printer and the disaffection of the bulk of our Hindoo composing establishment, we are unable to publish our news sheets till an arrangement is effected towards a compromise with our men. Before the Dusseerah vacation so many of our constituents disappointed us of remittances, that we were unable to give our men their usual amount for the holidays; and they left under a sense of wrong, much irritated and discontented. With the few who are staunch in their loyalty, we have managed to issue our advertisement sheets till a settlement can be made. To concede to all the demands made is impracticable, and would place us unreservedly at their mercy; to deny that there is just cause for complaint would be untrue and dishonourable. Negotiations are on foot, and till they are completed, we must appeal to the indulgence of our readers for patience."

The unfortunate editor was not long in settling the difficulty, as the paper appeared on November 4 in its usual form.

A MYSTERIOUS equestrian statue, shrouded in its wooden packing case, has, for the past few weeks, exercised the curiosity of everyone passing the junction of roads to the south of the Calcutta Fort, a local paper says. "Some people thought it must be the effigy of Lord Lytton. Others thought it might be Dr. Hunter, or Rai Kristodas Pal, Bahadoor. We know now that the statue is that of Lord Napier of Magdala, and that is to stand at ease in its present position till the Government returns to Calcutta, and decides on a fitting site for the presentment of the conqueror of King Theodore."

SURGEON-MAJOR CULLEN, of Khundwa, has had an opportunity of making some interesting observations on the existence of colour blindness amongst the natives. Dr. Cullen during the early part of this year examined 430 railway employés, by Holmgren's method of coloured skeins of wool. The result was the discovery of colour-blindness in one out of eighty-six Eurasians, or 1·3 per cent.; three out of forty-one Mahomedans, or 7·31 per cent.; and eleven out of three hundred Hindus, or 3·66 per cent. Subsequently Dr. Cullen extended his examination to native children, and found 12 among 471 boys, and none among 68 girls, affected. The proportion among the boys approximates closely to that found by Dr. W. Brailey's Committee among European school children. Further inquiry showed that colour-blindness was not associated with myopia or any other defect of vision, and that it was independent of the colour of the iris. At the same time, out of the 430 railway servants examined, Dr. Cullen found no fewer than 35 myopic.

THERE is little doubt, the Pioneer admits, that the present position of the uncovenanted servants of Government is very far from being a satisfactory one, satisfactory, that is, to the men of the Uncovenanted Services themselves; for hardly adequate Government attention appears to be paid to their demands. Reviewing the communication by Mr. F. Goldsmid, which we published a week or two since, one contemporary remarks:—It is not too much to say that certain grievances do exist, which it would be desirable to remedy if efficiency is to be maintained. It might even be desirable that Government should not stand upon the order of their redressing, but redress at once.

AN eminent Turkish gentleman, named Moulvie Jamaluddin-al-Hussain, one of the leading ulema of Cairo, lectured in Persian in the hall of the Calcutta Madrassa, on the 8th inst., upon the subject of "Mahomedan Education." Dr. A. F. R. Hoernle, President of the Madrassa College, occupied the chair. The Moulvie mentioned, a contemporary says, is an eloquent speaker, and is a personage of some note amongst his countrymen. He was educated in Paris, to which city he is on the point of returning; was subsequently appointed a Captain and Pasha in the Turkish service; and became eventually a member of the Privy Council of the late Sultan Abdul Aziz. Like Midhat Pasha, the Moulvie was one of the advanced Liberal party in Turkey. Sharing the same political opinions as Midhat Pasha, he is sharing Midhat's fate—exile. Although at one with that well-known Pasha, in the broad lines of his policy, that is, in liberalism, and in the encouragement of general education in Turkey, the Moulvie was strongly adverse to the assassination of Sultan Murad's luckless predecessor. Still partizanship in every form with Midhat has led to consequences at present unfortunate to the old Turkish savant.

THE Bombay Guardian evidently thinks soldiers ought not to be allowed canteens. Remarking on the recent murder case tried at Lahore—a case very similar to the sad occurrence at Colaba barracks the other day—the Guardian says:—"Here is an instance in which drink has caused the death of one soldier and the transportation and life-long misery of another. Who is responsible? Who supplied the canteen with liquor and invited the poor man to drink of it? There are States in America where heavy damages are obtained from those who sold the liquor inducing such crimes. It would be a dreadful thing to speak of H. M.'s Government as particeps criminis, but we may yet come to look upon it as such."

THE Chinese Imperial decree passing sentence on Li Kwen-ying, the Dai in Kun, or ex-Regent of Corea, "condemns the captive to residence at Paoting-fu during the remainder of his life. An appel by the King of Corea to the Emperor praying that his father may be allowed to return to Corea, is peremptorily refused, and it is intimated that no further petitions on the subject will be entertained."

A ROW is reported amongst the Chinese in Rangoon which, a correspondent says, was a serious affair, and might have been more so had not the police acted with exceptional promptitude. "Two sects of Chinese residing in the same street, making a living as tailors and shoemakers, worked themselves up into a frightful temper over a quarrel between a tailor and a shoemaker. The rival sects took sides, and one afternoon they went for one another, Kilkenny cat fashion, with sticks, bricks, bottles, and all sorts of instruments of death; till the police seized the foremost in the fray. The fight did not last long, but the large number of broken heads the Civil Surgeon had to heal thereafter testifies to the ferocity of the struggle. There is order now; but the ill-feeling has not yet subsided, and the police are in some anxiety. A number of the rioters have been heavily fined and sentenced to imprisonment."

INSTRUCTIONS have been received from the Horse Guards for the re-appointment of Captain Denys, 1st Leinster Regiment, to the Army Pay Department.

ON Major A. J. Stead's departure on leave to Europe, Major E. P. Ommaney officiates as 2nd-in-Command of the 11th Bengal Native Infantry, at Lucknow. Major Stead leaves India almost immediately.

LIEUTENANT BARRY, 2nd Worcestershire Regiment, has been accepted as a Probationer for the Indian Staff Corps.

THE following removals have been made:—Lieutenant Gurdon, Devonshire Regiment, to the 2nd battalion; Lieutenant Beames, South Yorkshire Regiment, to the 1st battalion; Lieutenant Mathias, West Riding Regiment, to the 1st battalion; Lieutenant Buckley, Leicestershire Regiment, to the 2nd battalion; Lieutenant Menzies, Wiltshire Regiment, to the 2nd battalion; Lieutenant Cooke, Cheshire Regiment, to the 2nd battalion; and Lieutenant Massy, Norfolk Regiment, to the 2nd battalion. All these officers will shortly be coming out to join their battalions.

A PROMISING young officer of Artillery (Lieutenant H. V. Cowan) was maimed for life in Egypt by a shot fired by a wounded man. The unfortunate officer was hit in the arm, and the wound was so severe that his life was only saved by the amputation of the limb. Lieutenant Cowan served in the Afghan war, and was a great favourite among all ranks in Kabul.

MAJOR WEBB, 8th Bengal Native Infantry, whose death, by suicide, is reported in the home papers, belonged to the General List Infantry. He entered the service in June, 1861, and was posted to the 8th N. I in 1872. He obtained furlough for two years on medical certificate, in November, 1880.

ANOTHER officer is reported absent from his regiment without leave. Lieutenant E. V. Goldsmid, late of the Royal Marines, Wing Officer, 17th (the Loyal Poorbeah Regiment) B. N. I., recently sent in his papers to retire, but disappeared from Calcutta before he was aware of his retirement being accepted. The 17th B. N. I., stationed in Fort William, are at the present moment rather badly off for officers, owing to the absence of one officer on musketry duty at Dum-Dum, and of two Wing Officers on medical certificate, in England.

NOTICE is given that commencing from next year the standard of individual firing to be passed by infantry recruits will be raised from 80 to 100 points.

MAJOR M. C. POOLE, Deputy Commissioner of the Rangoon Town district, is appointed Commandant of the Rangoon Artillery Volunteer Corps, vice Lieutenant G. Wilson, retired.

THE Rangoon Artillery Volunteers propose to go into camp at Monkey Point battery for a fortnight from the 20th of November for big gun practice. The guns at the battery are, however, not in a satisfactory condition. The 9-inch guns are being dismounted, as the Madras-made carriages on which they stood have proved worthless, and new iron carriages are to be ordered from England.

THE 23rd Bombay M.L.I. got hold of a very "soft" team of the B. B. and C. I. Volunteers at Ahmedabad the other day to fire a match. Though the native sepoys shot with Snider and the Voluuteers with Martini-Henry rifles, the sepoys, without added points, won a match at 200 and 500 yards (seven shots at each distance) by 8 points. Without any disparagement to the 23rd N. L. I., whose adjutant takes great interest in shooting and can no doubt turn out a superior teams for a native regiment, it may be remarked that either the B. B. and C. I. team must have been far from a fairly representative one of picked shots, or the shooting of the B. B. and C. I. R. V. is very far below average Volunteer form. As a rule Volunteer teams can give points to teams from European regiments, shooting with the same gun, and the difference in rifles used alone, according to the ordinary handicap, should have given the B. B. and C. I. men in the recent match an advantage of three points per man, or thirty points altogether. So that supposing both to have been on a par in the matter of rifles, the Volunteers were 38 points behind in shooting skill. The bad shooting of the Volunteers, taken as a representative team, is apparent from the fact that the score of their conquerors at 200 yards (standing) and 500 yards (lying down) averaged only 36·8 per man out of a posible 56.

THE Pioneer:—The two companies of the 2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders (78th) which were sent to Egypt to serve with the 1st Battalion (72nd) have certainly been treated in the most unhandsome manner as regards pay and allowances. They, in common with the 72nd, were placed upon English pay from the date of their arrival at Suez, although the order notifying this was not issued until a few days before they left Cairo on their return journey. Field allowance, it is true, was granted, but this was only a pitiful amount, and in no way made up for the serious difference between Indian and English pay. "The officers had to pay their native servants Rs. 20 per mensem, and it will be seen at once how even an item of this kind would seriously trench upon their English pay. Again, the Indian troops will, we suppose, be granted batta, but the two companies of the 78th will be debarred from receiving this, as they were borne on the pay lists of the English army. Now, they were in reality as much Indian troops as the artillerymen of the batteries which were sent from this country; and it will, indeed, be disgraceful if their just claims are not acknowledged, and the duty of the Indian military authorities to see that proper compensation is made in this particular case; the facts we have given are beyond dispute.

SHOOTING OF THE BENGAL ARMY.

THE returns of the annual course of musketry for the season 1881-82, of the British and native armies serving in the Bengal Presidency, a General Order, just published says, show improvement in every part of the instruction., and furnish proof of the exertions that have been made, and that the confidence of the Commander-in-Chief in the interest taken by all ranks was not misplaced. His Excellency specially notices the continued success in in training of recruits; a very large number have been returned as fit to fire at the higher distances, obtained last year, a result highly creditable to the young officers to whom this duty was entrusted. Commencing from next year the standard of individual firing for infantry recruits will be raised to 100 points.

Field firing has been regularly carried out, and the reports show the importance that is attached to this exercise by the Commander-in-Chief would, however, invite attention to previous orders on this subject, and impress upon all concerned the necessity for the economical use of the ammunition allowed, observing that such an arrangement is not intended to be of an experimental nature, the power of the rifle being already known, it is essentially an opportunity for tactical instruction in the collective use of the rifle.

The lately introduced company field firing is recognized as a very useful practice; the period for its execution is left to the discretion of commandants, but it is advisable to carry it out before the regimental field firing, for which it is a preparation, takes place, and the same argument applies to the long range firing of British regiments. More attention is required to volley firing, the reports generally show that the ammunition is more costly than not sufficiently instructed in the delivery of the executive word of command, on which mainly the success of a volley depends. The musketry inspections of Native Cavalry regiments under the present more extended system, have furnished the Commander-in-Chief with valuable information regarding the efficiency of corps. In the Indian Army commandants are at liberty to adopt any system of instruction in the use of the revolver that may appear to them most advantageous; a brief description only of the practice should accompany the annual return of musketry; registers are not required, but information has been obtained by want of care in the preparation of the annual returns by certain regiments, necessitating repeated references, and thus delaying the publication of the army report; attention is directed to the more careful compilation, and to the early submission of these documents.

MILITARY NEWS.

GENERAL HARDINGE and staff arrived at Quetta on the 7th instant, and took up their quarters at the Residency.

LIEUTENANT CLOUGH TAYLOR, Connaught Rangers, goes to Rangoon with the Transport Department mules.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

THE Bombay Volunteers' first battalion parade of the season took place on Saturday evening. The turn-out was not very encouraging, but this was due in some measure to the fact that many members had taken advantage of the four days of the Dewallee Holiday to go out of town for a change.

D. Company, as usual, was nearly twice as strong as any other company, but still had not a sufficient percentage of its strength on parade. The regiment assembled at the Town Hall, where five companies of twelve or thirteen files each were formed; and marched to the Oval. Here the manual and firing exercises were gone through under Major Bayley, and the Commandant subsequently put the battalion through several movements. After advancing in line, the companies wheeled into column, and deployed to the right; retired in column from the right in rear of the left; deployed to the left; advanced in line; retired by fours from the right; halted, fronted, and were dismissed. The movements were fairly well done for the first parade of the season; but signs were not wanting that many of the men require to attend the daily squad and company drills for a week or two. If they will turn out to these instruction drills, a great improvement at the Saturday's battalion parades will soon be apparent. The officers present were Major-General Hewett (Commandant), Major Bayley, Captains Proudfoot (Adjutant), Tennent, and Jordan; Lieutenants Freeborn, Whitehead, Nicholon, Anderson, and Roughton. The following was the parade state:—

THE CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.

WE congratulate Major Hutchison and the other officers of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles on the very excellent and unprecedented turn-out yesterday (Wednesday) morning at the first Battanion Parade of the season. The volunteers met on the old Red Road were formed up by companies, inspected by their officers, and were then marched on to the maidan, where they were inspected by their Commandant and formed up in column by the left facing the United Service Club. They next formed a four deep square, with the Cadets to its rear face, the Mounted Company being also in the square in front, on foot, forming No. 1 Company. While they were formed up in square two interesting ceremonies were gone through. In the first intance the medal of the N. R. A. was presented by Major Hutchison to Sergeant Linehan of E. Company, for having proved himself to be the best shot in the regiment during the past season, and in the second place a silver bugle was given to the same company, they having won it for the best volley-firing match. In making over the medal to Sergeant Linehan, the Commandant explained how it came to fail to the winner's lot, congratulated him on this being the second occasion on which he had won it, and expressed a hope that he would endeavour to win it again this season and prove as efficient a Volunteer as he had hitherto been. He also explained that it was customary to read out annually to the Army the articles of war applying to them, and that in the Volunteers Discipline Act, and as the Volunteers were part and parcel of the Army, he intended to have it read to them. This part of the proceedings was performed by the Adjutant, Captain Webb, and occupied some time. The Battalion was then reformed into quarter column, and the regiment formed into line. The men were then put through the manual exercise, presenting arms, volley-firing, &c. The line then broke into columnfor the right, and were marched past the Commandant, who expressed his approval more than once at the way in which steady marching was executed. Major Hutchison also expressed his approval several times when putting the men through their evolutions, as their general efficiency, and found occasion to remark that out of some 36 recruits who joined this year, 34 had proved themselves extra efficients in class firing. It is interesting to note that the number of 51 members of the Mounted Company present, 284 of the Battalion Companies, 50 of the E. B. Railway Volunteers, and 209 Cadets, making a grand total, 594 officers, of whom there were 27, of 660 men and 54 horses. The total number of adults on parade was 450 as against 278 last season, and the total number of Cadets on parade was 209 as against 316 last season. We think it would be well to know some when a second Battalion might be formed to be composed entirely of cadets. It seems odd that the leading scholastic establishment in Calcutta, St. Xavier's College, has no Cadet Company, as the College could easily turn out 100 and more. There seems to be a decided improvement in the popularity of the Volunteer movement in Calcutta, but there were scores looking on who should have been on the ranks. Sepoys and Hindus are not the fair sex predominating. The E. B. Railway Volunteers, after the parade was over, were accompanied on their way home by the band. The Mounted Company then marched past the Commandant, and afterwards went by in column, both movements being good. On foot they were, if anything, the smartest, though the other companies were one and all up to the mark and received the approval of more than one competent critic on the ground.—Englishman.

All the leading native gentlemen of the city were present to bid him adieu; and the Presidency of the Commission was met with garlands and garlands enough to satisfy the most ambitious prima donna."

FIRE AT CUMBALLA HILL.—A fire broke-out yesterday morning in a shed situated in the compound of Mr. Cowasjee Dady Limjee's bungalow. The fire spread rapidly, and caught a portion of the stables in the next bungalow, occupied by Mr. P. M. Mehta. The Fort, Byculla, and Pydownee steam and manual fire-engines repaired to the scene immediately the alarm was raised, but the Fort fire-engine, under the supervision of Mr. Boorer, of the Fire Brigade, was the only engine used. A supply of water was obtained from a dipping well about 130 yards distant from the fire. The municipal water-carts rendered valuable assistance in supplying the water to the manual engines. The total loss of damage done to property in the confusion that prevailed after the alarm had been raised. The fire is said to have originated through the careless use of a fire-place in the stables close by. The fire was completely extinguished by one o'clock in the afternoon. The damage done to the buildings as well as to moveable personal property is roughly estimated at Rs. 2,000. A Purdasee servant of Mr. C. D. Limjee reports the loss of currency notes of the value of Rs. 500, alleged to have been stolen from his box during the confusion that prevailed at the time the box was pitched out of the burning building. Three other servants complain of having property stolen from their boxes.

The rest were fined Rs. 2 each.

He was an educated young man and had twice visited England on mercantile business. On his return to India, he was appointed Postmaster of Aden, but failing health compelled him to return to Bombay, where he got an appointment in the Assessment Department of the Municipality. In 1872, on a revision of the Municipal establishments by the Hon'ble Mr. Hope, Mr. Lalcaca's services were dispensed with.
